

I always called those maggots that were involved in my Mother's fake guardianship a guardian mafia. Just like all mafia's (Italian, Black, Russian, Chinese, Jewish and even motorcycle gangs) are mafia's by the definition of 241 and 242.

Those corrupt guardians working together only to steal money are a criminal enterprise, prosecuted under RICO

◆ AI Overview

18 U.S.C. § 241 (Conspiracy Against Rights) is a federal criminal statute that makes it unlawful for two or more people to conspire to injure, threaten, or intimidate anyone in the free exercise of their constitutional or federal rights. Originating from the 1870 Enforcement Act, it carries penalties up to life imprisonment or death if death results. LII | Legal Information Institute +2

Key aspects of 18 U.S.C. § 241 include:

- Conspiracy Focus: It requires two or more people to conspire, but does not require the conspiracy to be successful, nor does it require an "overt act" to be committed.
- Targeted Rights: It covers rights secured by the U.S. Constitution or federal law, such as the right to vote, the right to travel, and freedom from involuntary servitude.
- Application: Commonly used to prosecute hate crimes, election fraud (including intimidation), and violations of rights by private actors (unlike 18 U.S.C. § 242, which applies "under color of law").
- Penalties: Penalties range from fines and up to 10 years in prison to life in prison or the death penalty if the violation results in death, kidnapping, or sexual assault. LII | Legal Information Institute +5

Note: This is distinct from 78 Stat. 241, which is the official citation for the start of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. National Archives \(.gov\) +1
